We had a lighter run of weighups this week, with approximately 400 head for the day. We kicked things off at 9 AM and worked our way through the cows and bulls before moving into the calves a little after noon. The weighup market remained steady with last week, with the majority of the cows once again finding their way back to feed rather than slaughter.

Then came the calves. We rolled into the afternoon with over 2,200 head to sell, and there was certainly no shortage of challenges facing the cattle industry this week.
The cattle futures board took a pretty good beating, and it's no secret that the numbers are getting harder to pencil out. Feeders are caught in a tough position. They need to replenish their inventories and keep their yards full, but with the uncertainty in the fed cattle market and the cost of replacement cattle, figuring out how to make those dollars work is becoming increasingly difficult. It's a tough balancing act when you're paying today's prices without knowing what tomorrow's market will bring.

Across the region, markets were mixed to lower this week, with buyers becoming increasingly selective. Some lighter-weight calves continued to hold their own, while heavier feeders faced more downward pressure. Smaller packages, off-colored cattle, and cattle lacking uniformity continue to see bigger discounts. The spread between the top-quality cattle and the rest of the offering is becoming more noticeable. When the market gets uncertain, buyers become more particular about where they put their money.

One thing we know for certain is that this cattle business is not for the faint of heart. Whether you're raising them, feeding them, buying them, or selling them, there are plenty of challenges on every side of the fence. We all want this industry to remain profitable from the ranch to the feedlot and beyond.

As we wrap up another week, we can't help but think about all the wheels it takes to make this place go around.
To our crew: From check-in to bringing cattle up the alley, sorting, penning, working the ring, and every job in between, you are what keeps this place running. We know we say it every week, but we truly believe we have the best crew around. Your hard work and dedication never go unnoticed.
To our consignors: Thank you for your continued business, your friendships, and most importantly, the trust you put in us to market your livestock. We know you have choices, and we never take it lightly when you choose Crawford Livestock Market. We are grateful for the opportunity to work for you.
To our buyers: Your job isn't getting any easier, either. We recognize the risks you take, the decisions you have to make, and the important role you play in keeping this industry moving. We appreciate your continued support and the competitive market you help us provide.
It takes a whole lot of good people to make a livestock auction work, and we're fortunate to be surrounded by some of the very best.
Thank you for another week of doing business the auction way. We'll see you next Friday!
